

Achieving the American Dream Shouldn't be a Nightmare

This Fall We Can Rebuild the Middle Class with the Employee Free Choice Act

We're working harder than ever but too many of our families are falling short of the American Dream. We're forced to take pay cuts to keep our health benefits; and prices on everything from gas to groceries are skyrocketing. While working families struggle, CEOs are making record profits. Even worse, corporations are working hard to deny workers their freedom to unite for a voice on the job—driving down wages, access to affordable healthcare, and retirement security for all of us. These CEOs wouldn't work a day without a written contract to protect their perks and benefits—so why shouldn't workers have the same protections?

There's legislation that will make sure all workers get a fair chance at achieving the American Dream. The Employee Free Choice Act will:

- Create a fair playing field that allows all workers the freedom to form unions;
- Prevent corporations from illegally intimidating and firing workers who try to form unions; and
- Give workers the same freedoms to negotiate their contracts that CEOs already have.

This November we have a historic opportunity to elect a new president and Congress to pass this legislation. It's the only way we can create an economy that benefits workers and gives every family a chance at the American Dream.
